KINOYME spiti (#kinoumespiti) is a collective dance project for the days we stay at home. The name is a wordplay with the Greek campaign #menoumespiti which means we stay at home and our company's name kinoume which means we move: 'we stay at home' becomes 'we move at home'.

The project emerged from our wish to stay in contact with our dance community and our students during this time of distancing. Now that, suddenly, we cannot dance altogether in the same space, we propose to keep dancing, to keep sharing our dance even from afar and to use creativity and humor to bring us closer!

We have received many amazing responses with short one minute dance videos of people moving, dancing, and improvising in their homes. Gradually a kinetic diary of our days in quarantine is created, as each one proposes their own version of moving at home. The home, the private, familiar space transforms into a space of creation and expression, providing contact and communication.

KINOYME spiti is curated by Konstantinos Katsamakis and Stella Mastorsteriou, dancers, choreographers and dance educators based in Thessaloniki, Greece.

It will go on and is open for submission until the quarantine is over.
